THE TEACHER'S DREAM.

BY W. H. VENABLE.

The weary teacher sat alone
While twilight gathered on;
And not a sound was heard around—
The boys and girls were gone.

The weary teacher sat alone,
Unweary and pale was he;
Bowed 'neath a yoke of care, he spoke
In sad soliloquy;

"Another round, another round
Of labor thrown away—
Another chain of toil and pain
Dragged through a tedious day.

"Of no avail is constant zeal,
Love's sacrifice is lost,
The hopes of morn, so golden, turn,
Each evening, into dust.

"I squander on a barren field
My strength, my life, my all;
The seeds I sow will never grow,
They perished where they fall."

He sighed, and low upon his hands
His sobbing brow he pressed;
And o'er his frame ere long there came
A soothing sense of rest.

And then he lifted up his face,
But started back aghast—
The moon by strange and sudden change
Assumed proportions vast.

It seemed a Senate hall, and one
Addressed a listening throng,
Each burning word all bosoms stirred,
Applause rose loud and long.

The "wildered teacher thought he knew
The speaker's voice and look,
And for his name, said he the same
Is in my record book."

The stately Senate hall dissolved,
A church rose in its place,
Wherein there stood a man of God,
Dispensing words of grace.

And though he spoke in solemn tone,
And though his hair was gray,
The teacher's thought was strangely wrought—
"I whipped that boy to-day."

The church, a phantasm, vanished soon;
What saw the teacher then?
In classic gloom of al frescoed room
An author plied his pen.

"My eldest lad!" the teacher said,
Filled with a new surprise—
"Shall I behold his name enrolled
Among the great and wise!"

The vision of a cottage home,
The teacher now desired;
A mother's face illumined the place
Her influence sanctified.

"A miracle! a miracle!
This matron, well I knew,
Was but a wild and careless child,
Not half an hour ago."

"And when she to her children speaks
Of duty's golden rule,
Her lips repeat in accents sweet,
My words to her at school."

The scene was changed again, and lo,
The school-house rose and old;
Upon the wall did darkness fall,
The evening air was cold.

"A dream!" the sleeper, walking, said,
Then paced along the floor,
And, whistling slow and soft and low,
He looked the school-house door.

And walking home, his heart was full
Of peace and trust and love and praise;
And singing slow and soft and low,
He murmured, "After many days."

A CATHOLIC REVIVAL.—The revival movement appears to be making its way throughout the whole country, and churches which, from their liberalism or their conservatism, were supposed to regard the movement with little favor, are joining in it. The last number of the Christian Register contains a long account of "Catholic Revivals in Boston," and describes a meeting in the old Chambers Street church, once a Unitarian and now a Roman Catholic church. No women, except about a dozen in the choir, were present. The meetings had been held during the whole week, and sometimes as early as five o'clock in the morning. Two thousand men and boys occupied the seats, the latter chiefly in the galleries. The "Rosary" was first said, the audience making the responses and repeating the "Pater Noster" many times over. The prayers at the altar were in English. At the close of the preliminary services, the preacher, officiating in hand, advanced to front of the altar and spoke from the text, "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve." After a very earnest sermon the preacher said, "Those who are ready to renounce the world, the flesh and the devil stand up," and two thousand persons at least stood up, and in measured cadence repeated the solemn words.

The provincial quickness of Irish wit is illustrated by an anecdote related by Captain A. While on the Peninsula, during the war, he came across a private belonging to one of the most predatory companies of the Irish brigade, with the lifeless bodies of a goose and hen tied together by the heels, dangling from his musket. "Where did you steal those, you rascal?" he demanded. "Faith, I was marching along with Color Sergeant Maguire, and the goose—bad cess to it—came out and hissed the American flag." "But the hen, how about the hen?" "It's the hen, is it? The hen, bless you, was in bad company, and laying eggs for the rebels."

While the French corvette La Volta was in San Francisco harbor recently one of her crew fell in love with a young French woman, and was loved in return. On the day the corvette sailed for Tahiti he sprang overboard and swam toward the vessel. The corvette was instantly stopped, a boat lowered and his capture speedily effected. He no sooner reached the deck than he sprang overboard again, only to be captured in the same manner as before. Among the witnesses on the dock, at North Point, was the young woman herself.
